Our experts answer your most pressing q

Q I want to wear bright pink lipstick for summer, but how do I find the best one for my skin tone?

A The good news is there's a perfect pink to flatter every complexion. If you have fair skin, look for bright shades with cool undertones, like magenta. It should pop against your skin without creating a harsh contrast. Medium and olive complexions look best in pinks with warm undertones, like coral. Avoid cooler colors, which can wash you out. Lastly, ladies with dark skin will look great in anything bright — the bolder, the better!

Expert Tip:

Before applying lipstick, rim lips with a matching lip liner to ensure color stays in place and to give lips a defined edge!

Q Sunscreen feels goopy on my face. Can I use face moisturizer with SPF as my UV protection?

A "Yes! Most face moisturizers with SPF provide the same UV protection [as sunscreen], but are specifically formulated for the face," says NYC-based dermatologist Dr. Gary Goldenberg. Regular sunscreens go on thick and greasy, which can lead to breakouts, but face moisturizers with SPF are designed with non-greasy, mattifying fluids that block harmful UV rays without clogging pores. For optimal performance, use a formula with SPF 50 and reapply it every two hours while in direct sun!

Q What's the right way to apply foundation? I use a foundation brush, but my makeup always looks caked on.

A "There's no 'right' way, but I do believe that brushes can give foundation that streaky, muddy look," says NYC-based makeup artist Lisa Pentangelo. "For the most natural-looking effect, use your fingers!" Dab foundation onto skin, then blend in a circular motion for a seamless finish!
